February Is National Cancer Prevention Month

This month, let's take a moment to think about how we can all live healthier lives and reduce our risk of cancer. Small changes, like eating better, staying active, and getting regular check-ups, can have a big impact. Together, we can focus on prevention and support each other in making healthier choices. ## NHP Staff Highlight: Meet Our Community Relations Manager

Raina Ali

Raina is from Canon City, Colorado, and has a strong love for her home state. She earned her bachelor's degree from West Texas A&M University (Go Buffs!) before completing her MBA with a focus on healthcare administration while living in Arizona. In 2022, she returned to Denver to be closer to her sister, three nephews, parents, and, of course, the changing seasons (sorry, Arizona!). Raina is passionate about helping people connect to resources, improving access to care, and supporting healthier communities. She thrives on problem-solving, building relationships, and driving initiatives that bring people together for lasting change. When she's not working, you'll likely find her discovering new coffee shops and
